Seven Railroads Tied Up by the Strike.

The Nickel Plate Switchmen Join in the Movement.

The Situation Grows More Complicated Each Day and the End is Not in Sight.

BUFFALO, Aug. 19.—The Lackawanna, the Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburg and the Western New York and Pennsylvania railroads are the only ones in full movement here this morning and no one knows how long they will remain in that condition. By the calling out of the switchmen on the Nickel Plate the entire Vanderbilt system in Buffalo is now tied up and the number of strikers is increased by nearly 100. The roads involved are now seven, viz., the Erie, Buffalo Creek, Lehigh Valley, New York Central, West Shore, Lake Shore and Nickel Plate. The others may be involved later, although as long as they refrain from handling boycotted freight they will not be dragged into the fight unless it seems absolutely necessary, the leaders say. The Michigan Central runs its passenger trains into the New York Central station, but its freight goes into the yard at Suspension Bridge and it employs no switchmen here.

The railroad officials profess to believe that the strike is nearing its collapse. The men say the battle is as yet beginning and that it will include firemen, trainmen, engineers and conductors, as necessity may require, until victory is won. The switchmen profess to be able to hold out a month at least. From a union standpoint the present strike differs from that of two years ago in that it has been regularly called and sanctioned by the grand master. This strike will be a duel to the death between organized labor and its foes.

Secret meetings of trainmen, firemen and engineers were held late last night in different parts of the city. Grand Master Wilkinson attended a meeting of the trainmen at East Buffalo. Rumors were rife that the trainmen and firemen were on the eve of striking if they have not completed the steps necessary to that end.

Delegations of firemen from out of town were here to confer with Grand Master Sargent who was expected to get here last night.

The engineers' meeting was an important one. Just what was done cannot be learned, but a delegation will go to Toronto today and confer with Chief Arthur. This step is significant in that it indicates that they have some sort of a grievance.

One of the leaders of the switchmen, talking of the situation, said: "All hands will go out if necessary—firemen, trainmen, engineers and conductors—but there is no need to call them all out at once. It is being done as the necessity arises."

Nearly all the troops had arrived by 8 o'clock this morning and General Doyle issued a general order establishing fifteen camps. There is fully sixty miles of track to be guarded, together with the round houses, repair shops, freight sheds and depots. When asked this morning concerning the possibility of kindred organizations, such as the firemen and trainmen, of different roads taking a hand in the strike, F. F. Donovan, of the state board of arbitration and mediation, said:

"No, I do not think they will. This is the belief of the local leaders with whom I had a short conversation in my room last night."

"Would you be in a position to know if such a movement was contemplated?"

"Most assuredly. It was for this reason that I met the different local leaders last night to ascertain if such a step was on foot in order that the board might prepare the way for arbitration just as we have in the case of the switchmen's strike. In my opinion this strike will spread no further than it has, though the kindred organizations might as well have it out now, for it will be their turn next. I know the switchmen counted on the co-operation of the trainmen, but they are unwilling to come out and as for the firmen striking, whatever idea they had of striking yesterday has now been abandoned. There is no fear that trouble will come from the engineers, for I believe that all the roads have a three-year contract with their engineers."

"How do you like the refusal of the roads to arbitrate?"

"It was just as we expected. We did not suppose they would arbitrate the matter when we proposed it and therefore we are not disappointed. The presence of so many troops has put a quietus on the strike and why so many soldiers were sent here is a mystery to me. At the most there are but 500 men out of all the tied up roads and there are 8,000 soldiers in this city where 3,000 would have answered all purposes."

Commissioner Donovan was to receive word this morning if any organization outside of the Switchmen's were to go out on a strike, but up to 10 o'clock he had received no word.

Chairman Purcell, of the board, also said that he had no knowledge that there was going to be a sympathetic strike, and no word had reached him that the strike would spread any further than it has. All is quiet at camp Lehigh this morning. All attention is being given this morning to the movement of trains. Lehigh officials are putting their yards in a promising shape. Two regular freight trains started for Hornellesville, one at 11 and another at 11:30. A freight started for Suspension Bridge at 9 a. m. They say that just as soon as the yards are opened at Sayre and Waverly they will begin running on regular time and will soon clean up the Buffalo yards. The strike at these points is very hot, as reported this morning. Two detachments of the Sixty-fifth were sent out to guard the men in making up Lehigh trains at the Tifft Farm and Scotts; eighty were sent to the Tifft Farm and forty to Scotts. Col. Welch's instructions to the men was not to fire a shot if it could be reasonably avoided, but to shoot to kill if they did shoot. "These trainmen must be guarded," he said, "and you know well what your duty is and what your bayonets are made for. Don't allow any nonsense."

The arbitration commissioners paid an official call upon Sheriff Beck and Mayor Bishop this morning and formally requested them to withdraw the troops. They were politely told that the troops would be withdrawn when there was no longer any apparent need for their presence and not before. A committee of five strikers called on Sheriff Beck and angrily remonstrated with him against calling out the state militia. One of the speakers remarked that Sheriff Beck acceded to the demands of the railroad millionaires while he ignored the men. There is still another rumor afloat this morning to the effect that the railroad telegraphers may be drawn into the strike. A locomotive engineer said this morning: "The operators are with us and should a general tie up be ordered, they will be with us. You can readily see that this would tend to add to the confusion of the railroad officials as they would be greatly hampered in communicating with points along the line, as well as the general offices." The railroad people do not seem to be alarmed by these reports and apparently do not fear the strike spreading. If it does they will meet it. A railroad official outlined the policy of the company this morning as follows: The railroads will never give in. I know that the employes are determined and the companies are equally so. If the strikers gain this point there is no telling where the thing will stop. Next year is the world's fair season and if the strikers win their point they would have the railroads by the hip and would not hesitate to ask for anything. Now is the time to stop this thing and it might as well be fought out if it takes all summer."

The Central is making progress in moving freight today and is getting away considerable live stock and perishable freight. About 400 soldiers are stationed on the Central property. The Lehigh is not doing so well. Few trains are being sent out owing to the troubles east.

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 19.—The early morning shows no practical change in the situation here. At their headquarters General Porter and Governor Flower are resting after yesterday's hard work. Fully 7,500 men have been massed at Buffalo within the past twenty-four hours. There is no indication this morning that extra troops will be sent for, or at present, will be ordered to the front. The total number of men ordered out is 7,883. The adjutant general thinks nearly 7,000 of the men are in Buffalo, that the 843 are held in readiness to go at any time. Rumors of a strike in the big switching yard of the Central here are again rife this morning. A person who claimed to be in a position to know said this morning that the men along the line are waiting for the order to strike. They have already received orders that with the first freight that came through to throw down their tools and quit work. "It is true," he said, "that not many of them belong to the Knights, but most of them belong to the federation of labor, which received instructions two days ago." If this be true much more trouble, it is anticipated, will arise. It was said last night that the old men engaged in the strike of two years ago, now living about West Albany, have been offered positions at Buffalo. It is further said that not a man has accepted the offer. A trainman, one of the oldest and most skillful at the time of the strike, was offered a position by Mr. Harrington and quite a sum of money if he would go into the yards at Buffalo and straighten matters out. It was also said that when a "caller" called upon one of the old strikers Monday night when making his rounds he was knocked down.

FIFTY GUESTS

Poisoned By Eating Ice-Cream at a Wedding Feast.

MARION, Ohio, Aug. 19.—A wedding feast was held in honor of the marriage of Mr. Milo Taylor, of the Larue Bank, to Miss Louisa Konkle, Wednesday night, at Larue. Shortly after the feast nearly all of the guests were taken ill, and some violently so. Physicians were hastily summoned, and antidotes administered. They are all, however, recovering, and the poisoning is thought to have come from the ice-cream.

DISASTROUS FIRE.

The Town of Geneva Suffers the Loss of $100,000—The Fire Engines Broken Down.

GENEVA, Ohio, Aug. 19.—At 2:15 o'clock this morning the fire bell awakened the people to witness what proved to be the worst conflagration in the history of the town. Thirty buildings of brick and frame are in ashes. The fire department was crippled by a breakage of the engine and an hour of valuable time was lost at the start. Cleveland, Painesville and Ashtabula were telegraphed for aid, and the men responded at once, but the engines did not arrive until over an hour after the fire broke out. The following firms were burned out: E. R. Cowles, grocery stock mostly saved, building burned loss $2,000; I. C. Chamberlain & Sons, clothing, boots and shoes, loss $26,000 insured for $15,000; C. Craine, druggist, stock loss, $9,000, insured for $7,000; Knight & Marsh, grocery, stock total loss, insured for $5,000; E. S. Robertson's barn and Calvin Stowe's barn both burned; Geo. Martin's livery stable contents saved. The origin of the fire is not known. It started in the rear of C. Crain's drug store. It was undoubtedly of incendiary origin. The total loss will foot up $100,000.

A HORRIBLE NIGHT.

American and English Tourists Narrowly Escape Death.

BERNE, Aug. 19.—The conflagration at Trindelwald was not extinguished until the Hotel de L'Ours, a church and sixty houses had been destroyed. It was 10 o'clock this morning when the flames were finally quenched and tourists and people were able to seek rest. The water supply failed, and but for the energy shown by the visitors at the place, English and American, the whole village would have been destroyed. Two hundred tourists in all were burned out of their abiding places and most of them started this morning for Berne. The village of Grindelwald is almost in ruins and many of the villagers have lost all they possessed. The residents lived mostly on the tourists and as the calamity has driven the tourists away at the height of the season, the prospects for recovering from the blow this year is very slender.

HOMESTEAD.

The Works Filling Up With Non-Union Men.

HOMESTEAD, Pa. Aug. 19.—There are now about 1,800 non-union men in the Carnegie mill. Two additional furnaces in the open hearth mill were successfully started this morning with suited workmen. This place is practically deserted by the strikers today, they being in attendance at a labor picnic at Ross Grove, held for their benefit. It is said that a number of Pinkerton detectives are searching for evidence against those persons who nearly beat them to death after the surrender July 6.

THE owner of the bull that wrecked the china shop had excellent financial reasons for disowning the brute. Some years ago two or three droves of steers met at a certain corner in North St. Louis amid much swearing and lashing on the part of the cowboys. The animals got all mixed up and before they were separated one unruly bull plunged headlong through a big plate glass window in which the corner apothecary had an expensive display. The cowboys suddenly lost interest in that particular bull and hastily scampered off with such cattle as each could collect. Not one of them would admit that the bull belonged in his herd, and the bull if alive is still roaming ownerless. The apothecary who had been damaged two or three hundred dollars' worth was eager to have somebody claim the bull, but in vain; and he had to pay for repairs out of his own pocket. Let not the real owners of the captured Pinkerton guns at Homestead emulate the cowardly example of those cowboys. Let them come forward, prove property and take their guns. Since warrants for murder are in order, the State of Pennsylvania wants to know who put those guns into the hands of the Pinkertons.

Wm. Bradley received a telegram from Homer Hartman, at Chicago, that he was wanted in Chicago at once in regard to his patent trolly for electric street car service.

COAL CREEK AFFAIRS.

Captain Anderson Captured and Held Prisoner by the Striking Miners.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 19.—It was rumored here last night that 150 soldiers whipped 3,000 miners at Coal Creek yesterday. It is said that twelve miners are dead and nearly twenty wounded. The fight began yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock. General Anderson, with his little garrison, is holding Coal Creek until the arrival of the First and Second regiments with 1,000 men, and the posse of 3,000 men under six sheriffs, who are moving swiftly on special trains to the scene and march thence to the relief and rescue of Fort Anderson. A committee of miners waited on General Anderson yesterday and asked him to surrender. They said they had had enough of bloodshed and wanted peace, but the convicts were to be turned over to them and the soldiers capitulate. General Anderson told them to go back and wait until the governor acted, but only death stared them in the face if they attacked the fort. A few minutes before 2 o'clock the miners began the attack. There were 3,000 of them, armed with all sorts of weapons. The return fire was ordered by General Anderson and a blaze of fire from every side of the fort belched out. Some were killed outright and many wounded. At the stockade they stopped and men clambered over the walls to release the convicts. The fort is some distance from the stockade and higher up. The doors and entrances were thrown open and the miners were at last in possession. They began to order the convicts to leave and had them all captured, when General Anderson assembled all his soldiers at the side the miners were on, and moving the howitzer to that side, began to bombard them. The miners stopped in the work of releasing the convicts and turned to get out of the way of the heavy fusilade of rifle bullets. Again and again the leaders begged them to fight, but they rushed down the hill to escape the furious onslaught of the soldiers. With never a halt and never a rally they reached the bottom of the hill, bearing twelve dead and more than twenty wounded miners with them. They hurried far out of the sight and reach of the guns. They then collected their shattered and wounded forces and it is feared there are more than a half hundred wounded and more dead than reported. Opinion is growing that an awful loss of life of good citizens and innocent men can only be averted by prompt action of the governor in calling on the president to send federal troops to the scene of action.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 18.—A special from the seat of war filed at 10 p. m., says: "A reporter who was under arrest by the miners since night before last and just escaped, says that the fighting began at 8 o'clock and continued without cessation until 6. During the fight two or three of the leaders of the miners were captured by General Anderson's troops. A truce was raised and the miners told Anderson if he would surrender their leaders they would allow him to return to his fort. He took the men and went down among the mob. When out of range of the guns he was captured and not allowed to return."

Coal Creek is virtually in the hands of the military authorities. More than a thousand soldiers are quartered in town. Occasional shots are heard but no regular engagement has been fought.

A cold drenching rain is falling throughout east Tennessee this morning and late arrivals of troops and citizens at Coal Creek are in a very unpleasant condition, as few of them are supplied with overcoats and a great many have no blankets. Captain Anderson is still a prisoner in the hands the miners. He positively refuses to surrender or treat with his captors. He is closely guarded.

KNOXVILLE, Aug. 19.—2:15 p. m.—In a battle between soldiers and miners Private Waltham, of the Chilhowie rifles of this city, and a man whose name was not known were killed. Three miners are known to have been wounded. When Gen. Carnes arrived at Coal Creek with his regiment this morning the telegraph office, and in fact the entire village surrendered without opposition. March was taken up in the direction of Camp Anderson. A mile distant on the way, they were attacked by a large body of miners, possibly 300. Fire was returned and considerable shooting was done for about ten minutes. The miners sent up a flag of truce and surrendered. The battle occurred about half past 11 o'clock. Waltham, the dead soldier, was a clerk in the East Tennessee railroad offices in this city and was twenty-two years of age.

LATER.

Three miners were killed. Waltham was of the sheriff's posse as a volunteer.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 19.—On application of the governor, the secretary of war has ordered 600 stands of arms to be sent at once from Indianapolis to Knoxville, where they will be distributed to the forces gathered at that point. Thirty thousand rounds of ammunition come with the guns. The lack of arms has been an embarrassing feature of the situation as the volunteers have armed themselves with whatever weapons they could procure. Another company from Murfesboro, seventy-five strong, will leave for the front on the afternoon train. Rev. Dr. D. C. Kelly has consented to lead 500 or any other number of volunteers and names are rapidly pouring in.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Aug. 19.—In response to the sheriff's call for volunteers to go to Coal Creek to relieve Generals Carnes and Anderson and other Memphisans, a large number of people assembled in the court square. If orders are received 500 men armed and equipped will start for Coal Creek under command of General Gordon, an ex-confederate officer.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 19.—Brigadier General Carnes wires Superintendant Huger, of the East Tennessee road, that all the miners at Coal Creek have unconditionally surrendered to him and Captain Anderson will be delivered at 1 o'clock.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—At the office of the Tennessee Coal and Iron company nothing could be learned of the disturbances at Coal Creek yesterday. The company will be glad to surrender its lease if it could do so. It offered to surrender it at the last session of the legislature. Vice President Baxter had stated this view of the case very strongly and President T. C. Platt agreed with him.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—It is officially stated that General Grant this morning received a telegram from Governor Buchanan, of Tennessee, requesting the war department to furnish him with arms and ammunition and that orders have been issued by the general to forward from Indianapolis 600 stands of arms and 3,000 rounds of ammunition. Governor Buchanan has not yet called for United States troops.

SOCKLESS SIMPSON

Called to Account for His Write-Up of His Constituents—Lively Scenes at a Reunion.

WICHITA, Kan., Aug. 19.—Quite a diversion was created on the old soldiers' reunion grounds last night by a controversy between Judge Botking, of Stevens county, and Congressman Jerry Simpson. In his speech Botkin made the remark that there was a Kansan present who had written the people of Western Kansas, in a letter to the American Watchman, that "the men are selling their honor, the women their virtue, and the children are becoming criminals and outcasts for bread." The audience demanded the name of the writer and Botkin answered "Jerry Simpson." Simpson was in the crowd and was repeatedly called for, but refused to come forward. At the close of the speaking Simpson accused Botkin of doing him an injustice and said the remark referred to was applied to the people of Boston and New York. This Botkin denied and said the letter was written in response to a request for an article on the condition of his constituents and promised Simpson that he would read the letter in full, and if he was wrong he would make public apology. And if correct in his statement he would publish the letter and place it in the hands of every voter in the congressional district. After a sharp exchange of words between Simpson and Botkin the latter said: "If you said this thing about the people of Kansas you are disreputable and dishonorable." The crowd was growing quite excited by this time and Simpson was threatened with personal violence. Judge Botkin interfered and Simpson was taken away by his friends.

COMING TO AMERICA.

Two English Bank Forgers Coming Here to Live.

LONDON, Aug. 19.—The Morning states that MacDonell and Hill, who are accomplices of Bidwell were bank forgers in 1873 have been released on condition that they leave the country forever. Both men started for America on being released. The morning says that Hill is a snowy haired harmless idiot, the result of his long imprisonment. MacDonell, except being much aged, looks well and is of dignified and gentlemanly bearing. McDonnell said that by means of money and personal influence he established communication with the outside world, and kept up a constant correspondence with his family. He occupied his spare time in translating foreign literature. His sister came to England early in the summer with letters to the prominent church folks like Archbishop Vaughan, and she worked cessantly on politicians for his release.

A HEROIC RESCUE.

Which May Cost the Rescuer His Life.

SHAMOKIN, Pa., Aug. 19.—After discharging a shot in a new well in Summantown yesterday morning, Eli Heilner went down before the smoke had cleared away and was overcome by gas. Lewis Hartman responded to his cry for help. He had hardly reached the bottom before he grew faint. The bucket would not bear two and each wanted the other to go up first. Heilner went first and when near the top fell and struck a rock, killing himself. Hartman had strength enough to draw himself and the corpse to the bucket, but fainted before he could signal. The men at the windlass saw the rope shake and hoisted it. Many persons fainted when they saw the ghastly burden. It is thought that Hartman will recover.

Boycotted Street Railway.

DUBUQUE, Iowa, Aug 19.—The Rhomberg Street Railway company has been boycotted by the Trades and Labor congress of this city because the company refused to allow its motormen to join the union.

Thomas Harris, of Antwerp, Ohio, was the guest today of Willis Souder.

IT WAS NOT MURDER.

The Death of Henry Hicks Was an Accident and Not Murder—The Day in the Courts.

Readers of THE SENTINEL will remember the account given in this paper of the death on August 6th of Henry Hicks, an old resident of Churubusco, a town situated on the line dividing Allen and Whitley counties. He was found dead in a shed belonging to Val Brown, of Churubusco. Over his body lay a heavy scantling, which in falling had caused his death, although the supposition at first was that he had been murdered, inasmuch as only the day before he had signed vouchers for $1,300 pension money. He did not draw it, however, and according to certain technicalities in the pension laws his family cannot claim it. The officers investigated the case and, on the supposition that he had been murdered for his money, arrested Samuel Thompson, Dellia Thompson and one other, people who it was supposed would be benefitted by his death. They were taken to Columbia City on the following Wednesday, where a coroner's inquest was held, and that officer discharged them. They then, with Chas. Hickman and Daniel Ragen, two other suspects, appeared at a preliminary examination held before Justice Gandy and conducted by Prosecuting Attorney Heller, of Whitley county, and all five of the parties discharged, there being no evidence to prove that they were in any way connected with the death of the old man Hicks. It appeared from the testimony, before the coroner and before the justice, that the death was the result of an accident; that Mr. Hicks had entered the smoke house and while looking about a shelf laden with iron and railroad ties had fallen over onto him, thus causing his death.

PETTY THIEVES.

Last night, some time after 11 o'clock, a handsome walnut rocking chair was stolen from the porch of the residence of Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Rodabaugh, 286 West Washington street. A handsome hand-made tidy from another chair was also taken. The police are working on the case, but their task is a hopeless one as they have no clue to the thief.

TOM TOOMEY CHEATED.

One of the best known old soldiers in the city is Thomas Toomey, who for a long time was connected with the Bass works in this city. Last evening he entered a saloon on Calhoun street and meeting another party they soon became involved in a discussion as to who was the oldest railroad engineer living in this city. Tom contended that the honor belonged to Tony Kelker, while the other fellow said it was Tom Tulley and soon a bet was made, Mr. Toomey putting up his handsome gold watch. Tony Kelker is the oldest engineer as far as years in service are concerned, but Tom Tulley is an older man. The bet was decided by the sharpers against Captain Toomey and the other fellow walked off with the watch. Captain Toomey knew that he had been swindled and placed his case in the hands of Deputy Sheriff Tom Wilkinson and Officer Stoll, who recovered it.

SENT TO AN ASYLUM.

Yesterday Justices Ryan and Wilkinson and Drs. McOscar and Proegler held an inquest of sanity on Herman Zimmerman, an inmate of the county infirmary. The man was adjudged insane and application will be made for his admission to the Richmond asylum.

COURT CULLINGS.

There were three drunks in police court this morning. They were sent to jail.

The superior court will convene August 30. Judge Dawson will return before that time from Petoskey, where he has been spending the summer.

Wednesday night burglars entered J. L. Gruber's hardware store over the transom and stole three revolvers and $30 in money. The police were notified. No clue.

The case of the state of Indiana vs. the city of Fort Wayne for maintaining a nuisance comes up for trial at 2 o'clock this afternoon before Justice Ryan.

The case of Henry DeWald vs. J. O. and Anna Keller was completed yesterday. Before a decision was rendered, however, the litigants reached a settlement before Justice Wilkinson.

Abraham Haines was arrested yesterday by Sheriff McNabb, of Columbia City, after a fierce struggle. Last month Haines assaulted Miss Frances Dohner, near Collamer, a few miles south of Columbia City, and immediately afterwards fled to the woods. He is now held under $1,500 bonds. Fears of lynching are entertained.

J. M. Robinson, as attorney for the plaintiff, filed a petition in the circuit court asking that May Craig may be divorced from Angus P. Craig.

Samuel Porter and Alice Cary have been licensed to wed.

PLEASANTLY SURPRISED.

Miss Lulu Burkmeyer Honored by Her Friends.

Miss Katie Burkmeyer gave a very elegant surprise party last evening to her sister, Lulu, who is visiting here from Houston, Tex. The lawn was tastifully decorated and music and games were the diversions of the occasion. A delicious repast in two courses was served and the guests departed at an early hour. Those present were: Misses Agnes Smith, Nellie Shaw, Maud Notestine, Alice Fitzgerald, Lizzie Carson, Allie Smith, Anna Starkey, Katie Lanker, Anna Boyer, Flora Miller and Katie and Lulu Burkmeyer; Messrs. John Schophorst, Harry Schophorst, Charley Clark, Claude and Ned Notesstine, August Young, Jim Smith, Charley Miller, Elmer Young, George Wagner, Charley Sargeant and Ben Shaw.

BOLD BURGLARY.

Jacob Gauser's Residence Entered Last Night.

A burglar made a very bold and open attempt last night to rob the residence of Jacob Gauser, on Fifth street. One of Mr. Gauser's sons expected to be out rather late and the doors were left unlocked for him. About 11 o'clock a younger son was awake, and hearing a noise in the house thought it was his brother returned and called his name. Receiving no reply he got up to see who it was when he discovered the person was a stranger. The boy immediately grabbed the fellow and called for some one to bring a revolver, but before anyone could come to his assistance the burglar threw him to one side and walked leisurely out of the house, down toward the old canal feeder. No alarm was raised and the boy did not recognize him. Investigation afterwards showed that the fellow had been all through the house, but nothing was missed.

HAPPILY MARRIED.

Samuel H. Porter and Alice V. Carey Joined for Life.

A very pleasant wedding party occurred at the residence of Dr. Carey, No. 200 East Washington street, at 1 p. m. yesterday. The contracting parties were Mr. Samuel H. Porter, of Aboite township, and Miss Alice V. Carey, the accomplished daughter of the doctor and wife. The ceremony was performed by Rev. C. M. Hollopeter, of Coesse, in the presence of about thirty relatives and friends, after which a most sumptuous repast, including all the delicacies of the season, was served. The bride was richly attired and looked her loveliest in blue velvet, trimmed in ribbon fringe, with orange blossoms and vail. The groom wore the conventional black suit. The presents were both beautiful and costly, amounting in value to nearly $600. The young people start out under cloudless skies and their many friends wish them unbounded happiness and success.

IRISH CATHOLICS

VERY UNEASY.

A Feeling Among Railroad Officials in Cincinnati.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 19.—An uneasy feeling exists in railroad circles in this city. It is feared that the switchmen's strike will extend throughout the country, and there are prospects of trouble here, as a report has come to this city that an order for a general strike was expected to come from Chicago within a few days.

A number of switchmen were seen yesterday in the different yards. While they were loth to talk about the matter, they intimated that there has been a great deal of dissatisfaction among switchmen on all lines, and that the strike at Buffalo has brought matters to a crisis. The men say that if a strike is ordered all will obey and go out, as it will be ordered by the national association.

Jay Gould Arrives Home.

NEW YORK, Aug. 19.—Jay Gould arrived here from the west this morning. He seemed well and in good spirits and went to his home in Livingstone.

WHEN will people learn common sense in the matter of trimming shade trees? Every season the tree-trimming fiend shows himself in one part of the town or another and relentlessly mutilates trees which there is no shadow of need for touching with a knife. He uses not only a knife, but a saw of large capabilities, and saws off branches of the largest size, until nothing is left of the unfortunate tree but the main trunk, a few stumps of limbs and tufts of foliage. The beauty of a tree does not invariably consist in a round or oval-shaped top, as some seem to suppose. A little irregularity in the length of branches adds to their attractiveness occasionally. Neither does the thrifty growth or health of the tree call for periodical cutting of its branches. In a state of nature trees flourish finely with no pruning whatever. The one tree used for shade that is not injured by such wholesale cutting is the silver poplar, but the slow-growing maple, to which the process is as frequently applied, is checked in its growth and in no way benefited. In addition, the appearance of the street is injured for a long period. The people who are not content with a sensible pruning that removes drooping branches out of the way of pedestrians and carriages and permits sufficient sunshine to reach the houses, but must cut and slash till all beauty and symmetry are destroyed, cannot be called barbarians, for barbarians are not addicted to such vandalism, but they certainly are guilty of an offense which is only a degree less than that of cruelty to animals.

A BROKEN SKULL.

Conrad Benner Meets Death by a Fall From a Scaffold—Deaths and Funerals.

At 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon a scaffold fell at No. 27 North Cass street, carrying with it Conrad Benner, the well known painter. Mr. Benner was engaged in painting the ceiling in the cellar department of A. Racine's factory, and had constructed a light platform upon two step ladders. The structure was loosely and carelessly put together and barely capable of sustaining its own weight. He attempted to descend from the scaffold to the step ladder, and in doing so missed his footing and fell backwards, striking upon the back of his head, causing the blood to flow freely from his mouth and ears. The other workmen rushed to his assistance and Dr. Stultz was called, who pronounced the wound serious and ordered him taken home. The patrol was called and he was removed to his home on Montgomery street, where he sank rapidly and died shortly after 6 o'clock. Though the distance Mr. Benner fell was only about five feet, the blow was sufficient to produce contusion of the brain, which caused death.

The deceased was a native of Germany and was sixty two years old. He came to Fort Wayne about thirty-five years ago and has resided here continuously since. His family consisted of a wife, a married and a single daughter, the latter but ten years old, all of whom were at his bedside when he expired. The married daughter is Mrs. C. Skatulla, who resides on South Hanna street.

Mr. Benner was a man of quiet habits, a devoted father and husband, and was highly respected by his neighbors. He has been a member of St. John's Reformed church for the last thirty years. The funeral services will be held Sunday at 2 p. m. at St. John's Reformed church, on Washington street, friends meeting at the residence at 1:30 p. m.

Another old resident of Allen county has been summoned to his eternal home. Yesterday at his farm home in Lafayette township, occurred the death of Richard Wickliff, of old age, in his eighty-fifth year. The deceased had lived in Allen county for many years and fully thirty on the farm where he died. He leaves four sons and one daughter, his wife having died several years ago. The sons are Michael and Edmond, of this city, and George and Peter, farmers, living in the vicinity of Zanesville. The funeral services will be held tomorrow, interment being in Lindenwood at 12 o'clock.

SPREADING OUT.

The Western Gas Construction Company Will Construct New Works.

One of the growing industries of Fort Wayne is the Western Gas Construction company, incorporated in May, 1890, with a capital stock of $50,000, and which has its headquarters in commodious rooms in the Pixley & Long building, on East Berry street. In the two years of its existence this company has built up a business beyond the expectation of the most sanguine member, and it now finds its present method of doing business perfectly inadequate to the demand and will at once increase its facilities. At 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon the stockholders held a meeting in their Fort Wayne offices, and elected the old board of managers, as follows: President, O. N. Guldlin; secretary and treasurer, Gordon W. Lloyd; engineer, D. K. Creighton.

The principal business transacted by the company was the determination to construct works, as soon as possible, for the manufacture of gas-making machinery, as the company has been compelled recently to refuse several orders for gas machinery, so pressing has been the demand. Mr. Jas. K. Cullen, of Chicago, manager of the Niles Tool Works company, was present, by request, at the meeting, and after inspecting the operations of the association was requested to see what machinery was necessary, and submit the same to his company, which will furnish the material required.

A site for the location of the works has not yet been decided upon, but will be by the time the machinery is ready. All arrangements were left in the hands of O. N. Guldlin, the present manager. All the machinery will be of the most approved pattern.

General Husted Better.

PEEKSKILL, N. Y., Aug. 19.—General Husted is reported to be better this morning.

THE sentence of capital punishment passed upon Colonel Henry Clay King, of Memphis, for the murder of the lawyer employed to prosecute a suit for slander against him has created a profound sensation from the social standing and the high position of the criminal, and there has been a strong effort to have the case otherwise disposed of. It is said that the Governor has refused to interfere, and that the law will take its course. Sad as it may be to see such an end for a brilliant and gifted man, there can be no question that his death is precisely the lesson which is needed in the South. There is still a good deal too much of the old-time feeling that a gentleman has an inalienable right to kill those who offend him, and it is only by a severe lesson that this feeling is to be reached. It is time that some striking example were made, and there seems to be no doubt that Colonel King richly deserves the fate in store for him.

THE republicans have abandoned the proposition to establish a branch of the republican national committee at Chicago. This is wise. Neither party would gain anything by such arrangement, and it would be the source of much expense and aggravating confusion.

GOVERNOR CHASE has appointed Willard New, of Jennings county, judge of the appellate court to succeed his father, Judge Jeptha D. New. At the same time the governor appointed Judge Henry C. Fox, of Wayne county, to the vacancy on the appellate bench caused by the death of Judge Milton S. Robinson. Judge Fox is judge of the Wayne circuit court. Mr. New is an attorney at North Vernon.

THE order of the Iron Hall is proving to be a snide concern, of the most reckless type. It proposes to pay extraordinary dividends and benefits to the members and as large numbers of people joined it for its insurance policies, the officials of what are known as old line insurance companies turned their attention to it and exposed its weakness. An application for the appointment of a receiver for the concern was made at Indianapolis the other day, and the trial is developing a great deal of attention.

THE automatic telephone switch, which is to do away with the "hello girls," appears to be no joke, as several cities have given orders for it. Those who have frequent use for the telephone will testify that it sometimes offers the best known example of the "pure cussedness of things inanimate," but there has been hitherto some satisfaction in howling at the operator at the other end. Under the new system, however, when the machine does not work, the victim can say what he thinks about it, and there will be no one to report him.

THE peoples' party held an interesting meeting last night at the corner of Lafayette and Hamilton street for the purpose of organizing a people's party club for the Seventh and Tenth wards. Addresses were made by Carl Swain, candidate for representative, and O. H. Ballard, of the Labor Herald. Short speeches were made by W. F. Austin, Henry Cohen, John Daily and James Mitchell, editor of the Dispatch. J. E. Ferguson, presided at the meeting and J. B. Sloat acted as secretary. Thirty-six persons signed the rolls of the club, and and an adjournment was taken until next Thursday, when the club will be permanently organized and officers elected.

THE Catholic Knights of America will hold their state convention in Logansport on September 6 and 7. The affair will draw a large number of strangers to that city, and the Pharos says the local knights are preparing to entertain the visitors in good style. On the first day business pertaining to the order will be transacted, which will be followed on the second day with a tournament of the uniformed divisions. Prizes of $50 and $75 will be offered for competing divisions, and a gold medal will be given to the best commanding officer. Divisions at Fort Wayne, Peru, Vincennes and Madison will compete for the honors, but it is understood that the Logansport division will not enter the list.

WILL there ever be a two-minute horse? The record was Wednesday brought down to 2:07½ by the Kentucky mare Nancy Hanks. This was on a regulation track and not the kite-shaped course on which efforts have been made to reduce records. From all accounts it was an honest race against time, on an indisputable track. Maud S. and Sunol are now eclipsed by Nancy Hanks, whose name, by the way, is that of Abraham Lincoln's mother. Sunol trotted a mile in 2:08¼ in California, October 20 of last year, breaking all previous records. In September Nancy Hanks trotted a mile (in a race, and not against time) in 2:15 on the track at Cambridge City, this state. Can a better mile than 2:07½ be made? Can she make it, or will the next record-breaker come further along in the evolution of the trotter?

IS A GHOST STORY.

The Terrible Experience of a Sentinel Reporter in a Haunted House in This City.

"Do you want to write up a haunted house?" said Chief of Police Wilkinson to THE SENTINEL'S reporter last evening when the two met at the Berry street entrance of the Aveline house.

"You bet I do," was the quick response. "Where is it?"

"Well, I'll tell you what I'll do. If you have the courage to go through the ordeal, I'll take you to the house tonight. There is no person living in it now. During the last two years it has had no less than twenty tenants. They can't stand the racket. They no sooner move in than they move out again. The place has the reputation now of being haunted, and I guess it is, judging by the stories that the tenants tell."

"I'd like to visit it anyhow, and interview the ghosts," said THE SENTINEL youth. "When can you take me to it, Captain?"

"Tonight. Meet me at the police station at 11 o'clock and I'll go with you."

At the appointed hour the newspaper man was at the police headquarters, and, with the captain, was soon on his way to the haunted house. We walked out West Wayne, and turning at two or three streets, were soon near the western limits of the city. Stopping at a yard at the corner of West Jefferson and Bloom streets, the captain said, "That is the house there. We will go in."

The place was a sort of a ghostly-looking spot, without a doubt—a two-story brick house, surrounded by trees, standing some ten feet back in the yard. We went around to the back door and entered the kitchen. The captain struck a match and lighted an old lamp that was standing on a box.

"The folks that were in here last," he explained, "left a number of articles in the house—some old chairs, a table, a lounge and other things. They are in the front room. We will go in there."

The newspaper man followed him through two rooms into the front department, where we found the furniture he had mentioned. From here we went through the other rooms on the first floor and then up stairs, making a thorough inspection of every room, locking the door of each as we left and taking the keys with us down stairs, placing them on the table in the front room.

"Now I'll leave you," said the captain. "Ghosts don't appear in rooms when there are two persons present, and as you want to see them and 'write 'em up' it will be better for me to leave you alone, but I'll give you some protection," and he took from his coat pockets two six-barreled revolvers, which he handed the reporter. "It won't do you any good to use these things on ghosts, but may be it will make you feel safer. Well, good bye. Tell me your experience tomorrow," and with this the police captain took his departure, leaving THE SENTINEL'S scribe all alone in that great, big ghostly house.

A feeling of loneliness came over me two minutes after the captain had taken his departure, but this was quickly shaken off and soon I was seated in a rocking chair, reading a novel which I had brought with me, and waiting for developments.

They came before I had finished the opening chapter of my book. "Rap, rap, rap," was the sound heard at the door of the front room, which led into the hall. "That must be the captain returning," said I, and in an instant I was at the door and had opened it. There was no person there, but to be sure about it the light was taken and an examination of the hall and the rooms upstairs made, but no sign of a mortal being was seen and I returned to my novel.

"Thump, thump, thump!" sounded heavily, as if some person was coming down the stairs. "That's the ghost again," said I. "Well, I'll let him come this time," and lighting a cigar and placing my revolvers within easy reaching distance, I awaited the meeting, which I felt was surely coming. "Rap, rap, rap," was heard at the door. "Come in," said I coolly, and in the tenth of a holy second I was trembling all over with fear and my hair stood on ends, for before me, not five feet away, stood a headless corpse with blood trickling from the neck.

I don't think I could describe my feelings to the readers of THE SENTINEL and I wont try, but, to tell the truth about it, I was pretty badly frightened. If the form before me had been a man with a head, courage might have been of some avail—but a headless form, wasn't that enough to take the "starch" out of anybody? I tried to put on a fearless air as I lowered my book, puffed at my cigar and said with a sort of indifferent air, "Well! who are you, what do you want here?"

"Who am I, and what do I want?" echoed the headless corpse, and the voice seemed to come from his chest. "I'll tell you. I am the owner of this house. I am the owner of this city. Long before the white man came to this part of the country I —"

"Well, I don't care anything about that," interrupted I "what do you want?"

"I want you," said the ghost. "You have come here to take my property and you must suffer the fate of others," and with this he drew a long knife from his belt and approached me.

Quick as thought I grasped one of the revolvers from the table and fired—one, two, three shots. I was a good shot and my mark was only five feet away, but instead of the headless form falling, as I expected it would do, it stood there when the smoke cleared away, and with the exclamation: "Ha, ha, ha. You didn't hit me," sank through the floor and disappeared.

"Well, that's ghost No. 1 disposed of, now what next?" and I resumed my novel and my cigar.

It wasn't long before I heard a terrible noise on the floor of the room overhead, as if a deadly struggle was going on. "You have murdered me, murdered me!" rang in my ears, and grasping one of my revolvers and the light, I hastened up stairs, only to find, on searching through the rooms—nothing at all—and I returned again to my novel.

Hardly had I seated myself in my chair when I was slowly lifted up towards the ceiling and let down again. This was repeated two or three times, and I concluded to get rid of the ghost, that I would take the big lounge in the corner of the room. This was quickly overturned, and occupying the other furniture in the room, I was treated in the same way.

I sought in vain to discover the modus operandi of the ghosts, but couldn't do it, and made up my mind to leave the house. No I won't, I'll stay and see this thing out, and I went back to my book and my cigar again.

A horrible shriek came from the hall just outside the door of my room, and a heavy form fell against it. I was there in an instant and opened the door, only to see nothing, but to hear a ghastly laugh at the top of the stairs. "There is something wrong going on in this house," I said, "and I am going to find out what it is. Ghosts or no ghosts, I am going to make a thorough search of the house and if some woman is being held a prisoner here I will free her." So out into the hall and upstairs I went. There might be some hidden rooms or secret springs, and I closely scanned all the walls. "I am in here, help me!" came from within one of the walls in the front room upstairs. I soon located the voice and pounded vigorously on the wall. I must have struck a secret spring, for I had hardly dealt a dozen blows when a hidden door in the wall flew open.

"Come in and see!" said a ghostly voice, and I entered. It was a horrible sight that met my view. Around on the floor lay a dozen or more dead bodies—murdered no doubt for their money, or some other motive. A young lady, beautiful in form, but with a heavy viel thrown over her face, stood in the center of the room and around her were six masked men with drawn knives. "They are going to murder me!" she shouted, and drawing the revolver I had brought with me I rushed to her rescue. One, two, three, four shots I fired, but still the masked men stood there with drawn knives and laughed. "She is ours. No earthly power can save her," said he who seemed to be the leader, "and now you are our victim, rash youth."

The six ghostly appirations closed around me. My time had come and I prepared for the worst. "Hurl him into the deepest pit!" said the leader, and they grasped me. Down! down! down! I went, but just before I reached the horrible rocky depths below I awoke to find myself sitting in the chair at the police station and Chief of Police Wilkinson standing in front of me.

"Well, are you ready to go?" said he.

"Not tonight,' said the newspaper man. "Wait until some other time. When I visit a haunted house I want to take Jack Kennelly, Tom Wilkinson, Lieutenant Lapp, Officer Rohle, Officer Tremmel and Marshal Franke along with me."

NEW ORLEANS' GHOST.

This Is Said to be the Pure Quill in the Spook Line.

"If there's such a thing on earth as a real ghost, there's a house in the suburbs of this place that's got it." The speaker has a prominent lawyer whose word is his bond, and he spoke to friends gathered recently about his table, says a New Orleans correspondent of the St. Louis Globe Democrat.

"My father moved to this city in 1825, ten years after Jackson's victory here, and rented the house I speak of. One evening he came in very much displeased. 'Where did he go?' he asked. 'Who?' inquired my mother. 'Why, the man who entered the house just before me. He nearly knocked me off the steps.'

"A thorough search was made for the man, but no one was found, so we concluded he must have been some drunken passer-by who had passed directly through the house to the garden behind, and out at the street gate.

"I was only about seven years old, but when the next evening just about dusk I glanced up and saw a man in a red uniform standing in my nursery looking at me. I know he was the one for whom we had searched. 'What you want, man?' I asked, and was still staring at him when he vanished. Not understanding the mystery, and yet struck cold with horror apparently unreasonable, I ran screaming to my mother, who repeated my story to my father when he came in.

"After that first one of the family and then another would catch momentary glimpses of a man clad in a British uniform and deathly pale, who vanished on being accosted. The arrangement of the house put my nursery at some distance from my parents' room, so my nurse was made to sleep with me, and one night she awoke me by sitting up in her bed.

"I did the same, and we heard steps ascending the staircase, and the clanking of a sword accompanying each footfall. The steps approached the nursery, and the man in the British sergeant's uniform entered. The night lamp showed him as pallid as death, and his coat flying open, the shirt torn away from his breast, in which gaped a bloody wound.

"The soldier started toward the nurse's bed, when she screamed and it vanished. My father came running, but found nothing. He moved, however, the next day, though he himself occupied the house several nights after, trying to solve the mystery, but he never did.

"The owner declared he knew nothing of the matter. Tenants come and go in the house, some remaining a single night only, while others spend several months there without being disturbed by the ghost, whose visits are irregular, but always unwelcome."

HEAD HUNTERS OF NAPO.

Ghastly Mementoes of the Warrior's Prowess in Battle.

Fletcher and Kidder, on page 473 of their "Brazil Illustrated," say: "The Munurucus are the most warlike Indians in South America. * * * Their buildings are adorned with the dried heads of their enemies decked with feathers." But the Jivaros, who dwell on the Napo River in Ecuador do more than simply dry the heads. They remove all the bones and then shrink the head until they are not larger than billiard balls and as hard and as glossy as polished ebony.

Chas. H. Knight, who spent five years in Ecuador, procured one of these dried heads, which may now be seen in the United States national museum. In preparing these trophies of their slain enemies the Jivaros make an incision in the neck and then draw the skin off over the skull just as one would in flaying a small animal. This process leaves the features intact. The next step is to shrink the skin, and incidentally the features, by soaking in a decoction prepared from some kind of an herb. Next the horrid relic is filled with hot sand and pebbles, which causes skin and features to shrink to less than one-fourth their original size. The mouth is finally sewed up and a hot pebble about the size of a goose egg inserted through the opening left by the neck. The skin tightens firmly on this and the ghastly souvenir is completed.

Light and Wood Pulp.

The fact has for some time been observed that paper containing wood pulp rapidly becomes yellow on exposure to light, this effect being due to oxidation caused by the more refrangible rays. Gaslight is found to be less active than the electric, because it contains a smaller proportion of chemical rays. To arrive at more definite conclusions in regard to the effects thus produced, a German chemist has made some practical experiments by exposing paper containing wood pulp in a room lighted by gas and badly ventilated. It appears that after some 5400 hours' exposure, the temperature never having risen above 21 degrees C., no effect had been produced by the various products of combustion. In another experiment strips of paper were exposed in a room so badly ventilated that the illuminating power of the gas was visibly affected. These strips were supported on a screen, while other strips were enclosed in sealed glass tubes and then exposed to the same source of light. At the end of 20 weeks the pieces exposed freely to the air were covered with a layer of pure brown soot, while those placed in tubes were quite unaltered, though the samples containing wood pulp had become slightly yellow.—American Cultivator.

"THY KINGDOM COME."

"Thy kingdom come," vainly the people pray,
Closing their eyes to evils at their side,
Worshipping self alone, not knowing where
In very truth God's kingdom doth abide.

But change, O God, the stubborn hearts of men
From blinding errors base, from evil laws;
Teach them that wrong will only vanish when
They first correct and shun each evil cause.
—Edward Randall Knowles, in the Christian Register.

SIEGE OF BERLIN.

During the early part of August, that terrible month of 1870 which was so full of storms and disaster, I was called to the house of Col. Jouve, a cuirassier of the first empire, and a man full of glory and patriotism. He had lived since the beginning of the war in the Champs-Elysees in the apartments up there. Can you guess why? In order to assist at the triumphal return of our troops. Poor old man! The news of Wissembourg came as he was getting up from the table. Reading Napoleon's name at the bottom of the bulletin of defeat, he had fallen as if struck by a thunderbolt.

I found the old cuirassier stretched out upon the floor of the room, his face as rigid and expressionless as if he had received a blow on the head from a club. Standing, he must have been very tall; lying down he appeared immense. His handsome features, perfect teeth and a head of thick, white hair, made his eighty years seem but sixty. Near him knelt his granddaughter, in tears. She resembled him very much. To see them together you would have said that they were like two Greek medallions struck from the same mould, only the one was old and time worn and a little irregular in outline, while the other was bright and perfect, like the complete brilliancy and softness of a new coin.

The child's grief touched me. Her father was on the staff of MacMahon, and the figure of her old grandfather stretched before her called up in her mind another image not less terrible. I reassured her as well as I could, but to tell the truth I had little hope. It was a case of hemiplegia, or paralysis of one side of the body, and at eighty one hardly ever recovers from that. For three days he remained in the same motionless and stupefied condition. In the meantime the news of Reichshoffen had arrived in Paris. You will recall in what a strange way the news came. Until evening we believed that the French had gained a great victory, 20,000 Prussians killed and the prince royal a prisoner. I do not know by what miracle, by what magnetic current an echo of our national joy found its way into the paralyzed mind of the semi-conscious soldier; nevertheless it is true that when I approached his bed that evening I did not find the same man. His eyes were almost clear and his tongue was recovering its usefulness. He had the strength to smile at me and to stammer twice, "Vic-to-ry!"

"Yes, my dear colonel, a great victory."

And as fast as I gave him the details of MacMahon's success, I saw his features relax and his face grow brighter.

When I was leaving, the grandchild accompanied me to the door. She was pale and was sobbing.

I trembled at the thought of the grandfather. He surely would not be able to resist this new shock, and what would we do? Let him keep his joy and the illusions which had brought him to life again. But in that case it would be necessary to lie.

"Very well, then, I will lie," said the heroic child, and drying her tears quickly, she went back like a ray of sunshine into her grandfather's room.

It was a severe task which she had undertaken. At first all went well. The poor man's mind was greatly weakened, and he allowed himself to be deceived as readily as if he were a child. But as he gained strength his mind became clearer. We had to show him the course of the army's movements and to rewrite the military bulletins for him. It was truly a pity to see the pretty child bending night and day over the map of Germany and striving to put everything together in a glorious French campaign; Bazaine before Berlin, Frossard in Bavaria and MacMahon at the Baltic. She sought my advice in everything and I helped her as well as I could, but it was the old soldier himself who aided us the most in this imaginary invasion. He had conquered Germany so many times under the first empire. He knew all campaigns in advance.

On the first day of the siege I went to his room—as I recollect—very much excited, and with that anguish in my soul which could only be caused by the condition of our unfortunate city, with war itself under our very walls, and our suburbs themselves converted into frontiers. I found my patient proud and contented.

"Ah," said he, "the siege has commenced."

I looked at him in astonishment.

"What, colonel, do you know?"

The grandchild turned toward me. "Yes, doctor. It is great news. The siege of Berlin has begun.

She said this in a perfectly quiet manner, keeping intently at her sewing. How could he suspect anything? He was not able to hear the conquerors' cannon. He could not see his unhappy Paris broken down and destroyed. All that he could see from his bed was a part of the Arch de Triomphe, and around him, in his chamber, the mementoes of the first empire, well calculated to sustain his illusions. Portraits of marshals, pictures of battles, the king of Rome in his baby garments, large tables filled with royal relics.

Beginning with this day our military operations were much simplified. It was only a matter of patience to take Berlin. From time to time, when the old soldier was wearied too much, we read him a letter from his son, an imaginary letter, of course. You can readily imagine the despair of the poor child, without news of her father, knowing him to be a prisoner, deprived of everything and perhaps sick, and at the same time having to read happy letters from him. At last her determination failed her. No news came to the colonel for some weeks, and finally he grew very restless and could sleep no longer. Immediately a letter came from Germany, and she read it to him gayly, at the same time struggling to keep back her tears. The colonel listened attentively, smiled in an approciative manner, approved, criticised and explained to us the meaning of the troublesome passages. But he especially enjoyed the answers which he sent to his son.

During all that time the siege was going on, but not the siege of Berlin, unfortunately. The weather was severe, and the misery was intensified by bombardments, epidemics and famine. Nevertheless, thanks to our care and efforts, and to the indefatigable tenderness that was shown him by every one, the old soldier's peace was not disturbed for a moment. Until the end I was able to procure him white bread and fresh meat. There was only enough for him, however, and you can imagine nothing more touching than those repasts of the poor old grandfather, so innocently selfish, he on his bed laughing happily, and beside him his dear granddaughter, somewhat pale because of her privations, guiding his hand, helping him to drink, and assisting him at everything. Then, strengthened by the meal, amid the comforts of his warm room, the cold wintry wind and the snow beating against the windows, the old cuirassier would tell of his campaigns in the North, and relate for the hundredth time the story of that unfortunate retreat from Russia, when they had nothing to eat but frozen bread and horseflesh.

"Do you realize it, my child?" he said. "We actually had to eat the flesh of horses!"

She did, indeed, understand it well. For two months she had not eaten anything else. As the days went by our task increased in proportion to the gaining strength of our patient. The enfeebled state of his mind and body, which had helped us so much until now, began to disappear. Two or three times already the terrible volleys upon the Maillot gate had caused him to jump, his ear having become as keen as that of a hunting dog. We had to invent a second victory of Bazaine at Berlin, and tell him that the cannon were being fired from the Invalides as a salute in honor of the victory.

One day the child came to me greatly troubled.

"The troops are going to enter the city to-morrow," she said.

Was the old soldier's door open? It must have been, for I now remember that his appearance was strangely altered that evening. It is probable that he had heard us. Only we spoke of the Prussians and he thought of the French and of the triumphal entrance for which he had been waiting so long, with McMahon marching down the avenue amid flowers and the flourish of trumpets, his son at the marshal's side, and he up above on the balcony, in a grand uniform like that which he had worn at Lutzen, saluting the tattered flags and the powder-stained eagles.

Poor Col. Jouve! He had undoubtedly imagined that we would hinder him from viewing the grand return of the troops, in order to avoid too great excitement on his part. So he spoke to no one, but on the following day, at the same hour that the Prussian battalions were entering the long avenues which leads from the Maillot gate to the Tuileries, the window up there opened softly and the colonel appeared upon the balcony, his helmet on his head, his sword at his side, and in the complete uniform of a cuirassier. I still ask myself by what effort of will, by what new hold upon life, he had thus been able to put himself in harness. He must have been greatly astonished, standing there behind the railing, to find the streets so empty and so quiet, the blinds of all the houses closed, and all Paris as gloomy as a post house. He must have been astonished, especially at the singular appearance of the flags, which were white with red crosses upon them, and at the fact that there was nobody in the streets to greet the soldiers.

For a moment he appeared to think that he had been deceived. But no. Behind the Arc de Triomphe there was a confused clatter and a black line which advanced steadily. Then, little by little, the peaks of the helmets began to glisten, the drums began to sound and through the Arc de l'Etoile burst the triumphal ranks of Schubert.

Then, in the dreadful silence a terrible cry was heard: "Aux armes! Aux armes! Les Prussiens!" And the four Uhlans of the advance guard saw high above them on the balcony a tall old man stagger and fall prone upon the floor. Col. Jouve was dead.

Those well informed as regards the affairs of the Pennsylvania Railroad company have but little confidence in the report that George B. Roberts, president of the company, is to be ousted—A. J. Perhaps the most unique club room in Northern Indiana is the one fitted up some months ago in the city of Elkhart, for the accommodation of C. G. Conn's employes. This club room combines a reading room, billiard hall, an auditorium for entertainments and room for social games of various kinds. It is kept open each week day evening until 10 o'clock and will be furnished with an excellent library and such appurtenances as are necessary for innocent pleasure. Each employe is allowed free use of the room and given opportunity for social enjoyment without the necessity of visiting places where his wages would be used for harmful purposes.

Take Good Care of the Children.

If you have children, you will be interested in the experience of Mr. John Cook, of Pilot, Vermilion, Ill. He says: "Two years ago two of my family, a young man and a girl, had very severe and dangerous attacks of bloody flux. The doctor here was unable, after a week's time, to check or relieve either case. I threw the doctor overboard and began using Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. Improvement was seen very soon, and my children arose in a few days from what I feared would be their deathbed. It is a grand, good medicine. For sale by druggists.

Simple Method of Removing Wrinkles.

It is easier to remove winkles than to eradicate any other defect of the face, and yet we daily see many faces, otherwise beautiful, rendered prematurely old by that shrinkage of the tissue we call wrinkles. A simple, but positive, treatment is Marquard's Rose Cream, which not only disperses wrinkles speedily but also removes pimples, blotches, eruptions, and lends an exquisite glow and transparency to the complexion. AMONG THE CANIBALS.

A Missionary Who Was Captured by Man-Eaters Describes the Region.

In May, 1891, an English missionary, Dr. Montague, who occupied a station near the coast in the western part of British New Guinea, suddenly disappeared, and for some time nothing was known as to his fate. It was discovered finally that while out in the forests beyond his station he had been captured by the Tungero cannibals, a tribe living further west in Dutch New Guinea, that had never before been known to venture so far east. The savages carried Dr. Montague off to their own country, a land that was practically unknown to white people. There he lived until the next February, when he was rescued by a Dutch steamer.

Very little news has yet been received with regard to Dr. Montague's experiences. We know only that as a captive he had nothing seriously to complain of except the poor quality of the food served to him. He modestly refrains from saying much about himself in the brief report he has made of his sojourn among the cannibals, says the New York Sun, and devotes most of his paper, which has recently appeared in the Globus and other German geographical publications, to the discoveries he made in the land of the Tungero cannibals. As they did not harm the doctor, perhaps the world owes them something for making a prisoner of him for a while. His involuntary sojourn has certainly been productive of some very interesting facts.

The people who captured him still live in the stone age. The eastern limit of their country begins about twenty miles west of the Dutch-British boundary and extends westward to Prince Frederik Hendrik Island. Along this extensive coast lives a number of warlike branches of this tribe, and the region is thickly populated. They inhabit large villages both on the coast and inland, and on the coast the towns are so numerous the whole shore seems to be lined with unbroken rows of huts. In their intellectual and physical development, these people belong to the New Guinea tribes. The men are handsome, muscular, well-built fellows, with high foreheads, and many of them are light yellow in color. Although they wear no clothing whatever, they lavishly paint and adorn their bodies. They wear nose rings, and their weapons consist of bows and arrows and stone clubs. Their arrow tips are poisoned. They build rude canoes from thirty to forty feet in length, which they propel with paddles. All the subdivisions of this large family maintain with one another the friendliest relations.

Among their house animals are pigs and dogs, both of which are esteemed as table delicacies. The dogs are used on kangaroo hunts, which are a favorite diversion with the natives. Sago, yams and sugar-cane are cultivated. Food is in great abundance, and the fruits of harvest are stored away for future use. Along the coast and at some places in the interior cocoa palms thrive finely, and the lowlands are very rich and fruitful. The fields are kept in excellent condition, and the natives have quite advanced ideas of irrigation, which they practice to some extent in their agriculture. The plains are specially adapted for raising large crops of rice and sugar cane, and Dr. Montague believes that portions of this new region could be turned into profitable plantations by European management.

The forests swarm with butterflies, birds-of-paradise and various kinds of pigeons, and abound also with the most valuable sorts of woods, such as cedar, sandal wood and other kinds. The rivers and the lagoons along the coast are full of fish and water fowl. The climate, says Mr. Montague, is as good as can be found anywhere in tropical countries, and is far more healthful than most other parts of New Guinea. The reason is because the territory lying on and near the south and west coast has the benefit for eight months in the south of the monsoon, while during the remaining four months the northwest monsoon prevails.

Dr. Montague lived in the country nine months, and, although his food was bad, he enjoyed excellent health. Only one language, with some dialectic differences, is spoken along the whole coast, and the missionary is now engaged upon the preparation of a dictionary of the language.

He found that the people are affected to some extent with leprosy. They are very fond of eating the bodies of people they take in battle, but only those who are killed or captured on the war expeditions go into the cannibal pot. Unlike most other savage peoples, child murder is unknown.

Dr. Montague believes that a very profitable trade could be developed. There are, however, hardly any good harbors, though there is good anchorage in the river mouths for vessels of light draught.

The Work of Birds.

On taking off the roof of a house near Cambridge, which had been on fire, it was found that a quantity of straw had been carried by birds between the roof and the ceiling and this had been ignited from a hole in the chimney. Altogether the birds had taken up three or four sacks of rubbish.

For Morning Wear.

The skirts of pretty flowered and striped French cambrics for morning uses are made with a deep hem, or more usually a single small ruffle of the goods put on with a heading, or a bias band with a piping each side, of cambric the color of the flower or the stripe. The corsage is plaited, and is very often completed by a large cape collar of Irish point or fine linen lace. The sleeves are very full on the shoulders, and gathered to a long cuff covered with the lace. The waist is sewed permanently to the skirt and a ribbon belt, with many streamers at one side, covers the joining.

Pretty Summer Textiles.

The new grenadines, with silk stripes in delicate tints, are particularly suitable for afternoon toilets for this sultry season. Fleurette is another similar textile that makes up extremely well over tinted China silk. Crocodile crepons and goffered mulls are also new, the former a very pretty material worn by some returned visitors to Paris. This has raised silk patches on it, imitating the crocodile. Messina fabrics have a creped appearance and are striped, the stripes being in two contrasting colors. These materials are both warranted fast colors, so also the "art delaines" and "Berar twills," the latter stuff being recommended as particularly serviceable.

A DEADLY COURSE.

An Elective That Only a Few Harvard Medical Men Take.

There is an elective course in the last year at the Harvard medical school that only a few men take. It's too dangerous, according to the Boston Herald.

That much-shunned study is the nurse's course at the Boston cooking school, and the reason it is so dangerous is because the young sawbones must eat everything they cook. That professional instinct that makes the experienced doctor refuse to take his own medicine is greatly shocked by such an outrageous rule, and sometimes the shock to his mind communicates itself to his physical system also.

Last winter there were eight young doctors who took the nurse's course, and though they ate their last lesson they all survive. All of the eight were young men with considerable conscience left in these conscienceless days.

"We want to cure our patients—when we get them—and nobody knows but that cooking will cure them if medicines fail. If we die of our own cooking, we certainly can not die of our own medicines."

So the die was cast, and with fortitude they presented themselves to the accomplished lady who was to instruct the friends and nurses of their prospective patrons.

To do the young men justice they were not half bad in their new study. They listened with attention and some understanding to the reading of the first recipes, and then, taking off their cuffs, they started in to make gruel and soup and beef tea, and such like rudimentary decoctions.

With scientific delicacy they dissected carcasses of chicken and fractions of oxen, and put them in a proper hygienic condition; but the sight of them spoiled the first broth altogether, and were sick all night in consequence.

Slowly they progressed through oysters and chops and innumerable delicacies for the sick up to the topmost pinnacle of sponge cake and ice cream. Lesson after lesson was eaten with comparative impunity, so that when the time for the last lesson came a friend was permitted to share it with them. The programme suggested a luncheon of several courses—a course for each man. The materials were ready, so after the teacher's preliminary explanations the medical cooks made a rush for the washbowl and scrubbing brush. This was an encouraging sign.

Then, with clean hands, they made a rush for utensils, and in five minutes it looked as though they expected to feed an army of ostriches on tinware and crockery. Then they worked hard for an hour. Then they looked at the clock and began to guess how long their messes had been on the fire. If they did not guess right, the teacher, who silently noted everything, corrected them. Then there was a long wait, when the pots got lots of watching and the oven came pretty near being forgotten. Then a rush on the china closet, and the men served each other standing around the operating table.

It proved to be a very eatable meal, and the men had a very jolly time getting it. They made funny physiologic comparisons, diagnosed each others cases, and there was no coolness between them until the soup man complained of the inordinate appetite for salt and pepper that the other fellows seemed to have. The chops got their share of the fire surely, but no fault could be found with the ice cream or the sponge cake. The men mopped the perspiration from their foreheads, wrapped up bits of cake to throw confusion on sarcastic girl friends, and left only a mountain of dirty dishes on the scene of their final triumph.

HE LEFT HOME.

Because of a Slight Understanding With His Venerable Papa.

"My first visit to St. Louis was twenty years ago," said Major Lon Scarlock, of Denver, to a St. Louis Republic man. "I was a boy of 12, and had left my Illinois home between two days to avoid an interesting seance with my paternal ancestor. He was a druggist, with a penchant for live stock. In a lot back of the store was an eighteen-foot well dug and a shed with a billy goat, with well-developed butting propensities, was kept securely anchored. One day my father decided that the well needed cleaning, and sent my older brother down while he remained at the surface and drew up the mud by means of a windlass and bucket. Some evil spirit prompted me to slip the cable of that goat. He waited until my respected sire was pulling up a bucket of slush, his suspenders strained to their utmost tension, when he suddenly shot forward and struck the rear elevation of the head of our distinguished house with the solid impact of a pile driver. The next moment there was a sound from the bowels of the earth, but it was not the sound of revelry. It more resembled a he-cyclone ripping up a mile of plank road and driving it through the pulsating heart of a colored camp meeting. The goat had forgotten to remember the well, and while that good old man was chasing the bucket to the bottom, the goat was chasing him. The village fire department pulled the trio out and turned the hose on them and I boarded a box car en route to St. Louis."

Two Centuries Old.

Antiquarians have established the fact that General Sherman did not originate the expression that "the only good Indian is a dead Indian." It was first used in Connecticut about two centuries ago, at which time those people were not so friendly to the Indians as they have become since the red man ceased from troubling, and his deviltry was not so personally inconvenient to them.

ACTOR SCANLAN DYING.

He is Now in the Last Stage of Paresis in New York.

All hope of the recovery of William J. Scanlan, the Irish comedian, who has frequently appeared in this city, has passed. He is now in New York in the last stages of mental disease. A few months and the curtain will be rung down. He is the only one who does not recognize the gravity of his condition. He believes it is only a question of time when he will again be before the footlights, but his case is more hopeless now than it was a month ago. Even his faithful little wife, who visits him three times a week, is now thoroughly resigned; she is prepared for the inevitable. The asylum physicians have not attempted to buoy up her spirits by holding out false hopes. They told her the first week her husband entered the asylum that he could not recover. She did not believe it. There is no necessity for telling her now that the actor's life is drawing to a close; she can see it for herself.

Two weeks ago Scanlan took a decided turn for the worse. The actor was playing croquet one afternoon on the lawn in front of the villa that stands up to the right of the entrance gate. About 4 o'clock an itinerant organ grinder came along and ground out the "Swing song" from the play "Mavourneen" that Scanlan was appearing in at the time he was stricken with paresis. The actor no sooner heard the first notes than he broke out into a paroxysm of uncontrollable rage, and declared that the organ grinder had been sent up by his enemies to annoy him. He became so violent that his private attendant tried to lead him away from the lawn. He fought like a tiger for his liberty, until two of the gentlemen came up and convinced him that the organ grinder had gone along the road and would bother him no more. Since then he has been growing rapidly worse.

WOMAN'S LAUGHTER.

Tight Lacing Has Turned It Into a Harsh Cackle.

It has become quite the practice to ascribe to the wearing of the corset most of the sins of omission and commission, the ills and evils of womankind, and the latest charge to be laid at the door of the girdle of bone and buckram is that it is responsible for the decadence of woman's laughter. Certain it is that the "soft ripple," the "ringing melody," the "musical trill" of a woman's laugh is rarely heard, save in the poet's fancy, rarely indulged in by any woman outside the covers of the novel. The woman out of the book smiles immoderately if she has pretty teeth, and cackles a shrill accompaniment to the sharp staccato shrieking that fashionable women consider "talking," which makes the hysterical ecstacy of the afternoon tea like nothing so much as the pandemonium of a poultry show. But the low musical merriment of a real laugh is indeed as rare as it is exquisite.

And the prosaic people who go about the world classifying the colors of the rainbow and analyzing the fragrance of the roses tell us that this rippling melody is produced by the vibration of the diaphragm and the elasticity of the other respiratory muscles. When this diaphragm is laced down with bones and steels so that it is only by hydraulic power that it pumps enough air into a woman's lungs to keep her from dropping dead when she stands, it hasn't any strength to waste on getting up melodious laughter; it grows pessimistic and disgruntled, and doesn't see anything funny in this hard-working life to laugh at.

A LAWN PARTY.

Miss Mamie Lee Royally Entertains a Number of Friends.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lee, of 381 South Hanna street, was last night the scene of a lawn party, given by their charming daughter, Miss Mamie. The spacious and pleasant lawn was lighted and beautified by dozens of Chinese lanterns, and the happy guest as the flittered from place to place in their innocent games formed a scene which the witness will long remember with pleasure. It was a merry party and reflects much credit upon the entertainig qualities of the fair hostess. At a late hour cooling refreshments were served. Those who participated in the pleasures of the evening were the Misses Lillian Mathis, Jessie Bradley, Eva LaMar, Della Farnan, Mary Bauer, Nettie Skinner, Maud Piatt, Mary Reekling, Mattie Miller, Edith Hippenheimer, and the Messrs. Adrian LaMar, Frank Cutshall, Frank O'Brien, Ed. Kuhle, Ed. King, Clifford Wallace, Fred Gumpper and Harry Olds.

A Bicyclist Replies.

EDITOR SENTINEL:

Noticing the article referring to positions on bicycles in last evening's issue, I infer that the writer of the article is greatly opposed to the "humping position" practiced by some of our riders. I agree to some extent with him, but not so strict as he would have it. There is some advantage in a slightly inclined position and a disadvantage in an extremely forward position.

To lower a record of 2:15 to 2:11, as Taylor did, has a tendency to make one hump himself somewhat.

Yours truly, W. G. BURNS.

V. Gutermuth, the Ladies', Misses' and Children's Clothier, offers to Ladies an experience of seventeen years in this line. Will open August 20.

Why Dentists Use Gold Filling.

People seem, said a practical dentist recently, to wonder why it is that dentists use gold for stopping teeth, and are inclined to believe that it is because they wish to run up the bills. As is well known, silver would resist the acids found in the mouth quite as well, and I have been asked at least twenty times why I did not use silver. If those who are so anxious to cast aspersions on the dentists would only study metallurgy they would find that the reason we employ only gold is that it is the only metal that will weld while cold. Silver will not do so; nor will anything else. The cohesive properties of perfectly smooth and clear gold are astonishing. If you take a sheet of gold foil and let it fall upon another, both will be so firmly joined that it will be impossible to separate them. It is this property that makes gold valuable to dentists and not the desire to increase bills.—Saturday Evening Post.

Wonderful Record of a Jersey Cow.

On July 21, Gen. Samuel H. Moore of Huntsville, Ala., gave an entertainment in honor of the completion of a remarkable year's record of his Jersey cow, Signal's Lily Flag. The record shows a product of butter, 1,047 pounds ¾ ounce, and milk, 11,339 pounds, constituting the Lily Flag winner of the Derby of the Jerseys against the great Bisson's Bells, whose record was: butter, 1,028 pounds 15¾ ounces; milk, 9,412 pounds 7 ounces.

Size of the Confederate Army.

There is a decided difference of opinion as to the number of men who fought on the Confederate side during the war of the rebellion. It is difficult to give a correct estimate, but many authorities suppose the total number was about 600,000.
